WORLD-FLUTIST JOSEPH L YOUNG ADDS CHINESE ERHU, HAMMERED DULCIMER AND CELTIC HARP

If you have not yet experienced the mesmerizing musical magic of flute master Joseph L Young, get ready. His fourth album, ETHEREUM, is out and it showcases his many talents -- simply incredible ethnic flute playing, ethereal ambient tunes mixed with melodic soloing on others, one tune with a flute-sax duet (yes, he also plays sax), and solid synthesizer backing (sometimes sounding like a variety of world instrumentation).

I particularly liked the fact that he uses sounds I don't hear all the time like the erhu string instrument and xiao flute from China, the hammered dulcimer, and something he calls a metal Moyo drum (guess you have to search-engine that one).

You will not be disappointed in exploring the excellent music on this recording. Give it a shot. He is an excellent flute player, and so much more.
